Monument Types and Dates

WATERMILL (Late Post-medieval to Modern - 1700 AD to 2050 AD)
Evidence                      EXTANT BUILDING

---

Description and Sources

Description - None recorded

<1> Ashton, Norman, 1977, Leicestershire Watermills, p97 (Bibliographic reference). SLE156.

A watermill is mentioned at Thrussington in the Domesday Survey. The mill ceased working in 1910 and the grinding gear was taken out during World War 2 but the all wooden wheel survives. The wheel is of the undershot type, about 12 feet in diameter and five feet wide and drove three pairs of grinding stones.

EXTANT BUILDING

Description and Sources*Description*Listed building description:

Church. C13-C15 and much restored 1877. Restoration by Goddard and Paget of Leicester. Ironstone with limestone dressings and Swithland slate roof with stone stack on nave east gable. Stone coped gables, some with cross finials. Stepped buttresses, angle and diagonal buttresses. West tower, nave, aisles, chancel and south porch.

C14/C15 tower of three stages with plinth, north-east projecting stair, west window, 1-light above, clock faces to north and west, four 2-light bell openings with crenellated transoms, gargoyles, battlements and crocketed pinnacles.

Nave arch, now blocked, probably double chamfered. Three bay north arcade of c.1300 with double chamfered arches on octagonal piers and responds. Similar four bay south arcade, but with hood moulds and head and label stops. Perpendicular clerestory with three 2-light windows on each side. 3 1/2 bay C19 roof with braces curving beneath collars. North aisle mainly C19, with five 2-light windows. Double chamfered chancel arch on restored polygonal responds. Late C13 chancel. On north wall, a 2-light window with Y-tracery, arched niche and 2 square niches. 3-light east window with Intersected tracery. On south wall 3-light with Intersected tracery and 2-light with Y-tracery.

Double piscina with stiff-leaf capital and pointed trefoiled arches with fillets. Hood mould with label stops. South door and small 1-light to right. Chancel floor probably of Minton tile. C19 boarded wagon roof. Mainly C19 south aisles with three 3-light and two 2-light windows, piscina with cusped head and sedilia. Much restored many-moulded south doorway and south porch with double chamfered arch. Octagonal font, probably C14, with carved head projecting from one side, on C19 base. C18 and C19 wall monuments. Kelly's 'Leicester, Rutland, Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire' 1881 and Pevsner. Goddard & Paget, 1877

<2> Pevsner N, 1984, The Buildings of England Leicestershire and Rutland (Bibliographic reference). SLE4. "Small. The exterior in 'pleasing decay' due to the weathering of the ironstone. Traces of an early unaisled S wall visible externally between nave and S aisle and in the spandrels of the S arcade. Chancel of the late C13; PISCINA and credence shelf with still-leaf capitals and trefoiled arches with fillets. Intersected tracery in the E window. Of the same time the S doorway with one order of shafts and a finely moulded arch. S arcade of c.1300 with octagonal piers, one oddly with a circular abacus. Next the small Perpendicular embattled tower was built within the nave, then the N arcade S of the former wall (see the successive roof-lines on the tower W face). This gives the church a curiously off-balance appearance. The N arcade has taller octagonal piers than the S. Both have the standard double-chamfered arches. N aisle rebuilt in 1877 by Goddard & Paget as part of a heavy general restoration."
